SolidCAM 2018 SP2 Multilang for SolidWorks 2012-2018 x64 .B-tryptophan linkage of the spore surface protein of B. subtilis. B-tryptophan (trp) residues are linked to amino acids that appear to occur in a narrow range of positions in the 16-kDa spore surface protein of Bacillus subtilis. These residues are located at the N-terminal portions of four polypeptides of the 16-kDa protein. The C-terminal portion of each of the polypeptides includes many of the B-tryptophan residues. Trp residues are linked to the carboxyl end of glutamate (Glu) in the Glu-Gly-X-Gly tripeptide where X is Ser, Ala, Pro, Gly, His, Lys, Arg, Ser, Tyr, Leu, or Phe, and to lysine (Lys) in the glycine-Lys-X-X-Asp tripeptide. In each instance of the tripeptide, the carboxyl group of the amino acid is adjacent to the C-terminus of an adjacent polypeptide. This linkage suggests a structural conformation in which the N-terminus of the 16-kDa protein folds back onto the C-terminal domain to form a continuous ring composed of two stacked polypeptide chains. # SPDX-License-Identifier: GPL-2.0-only # TC_INFRA_HOST_${PN} += "dump-strata.c" TC_INFRA_HOST_${PN}_TESTS += "test-dump-strata" HOST_COMMON_DIRS += "${LINUXINCLUDE}/net/ipv4" HOST_COMMON_SRC_DIRS += "${LINUXINCLUDE}/net/ipv4" LINUXINCLUDE =..
