Kids who got an 'F' on their At-Risk Assessment form were required to return to the DMV branch a week later, to answer further questions regarding their mobility, and, as it turns out, they had to have the entire background check and separation phone call done again. The New York Daily News spoke with Jim Gallagher, an employee at the DMV's Brooklyn offices, who explained how the DMV is forced to review the background of applicants who fail the At-Risk Assessment form every second time they apply: "Just now, we got a call, and the guy said, 'Yes, I'm here to re-do

Build and run your own tech company in the Simulation Game of Real Business. • The world of Tech Corp. is filled with various industries and businesses that compete for a customer base in a fast-paced, dynamic world. • Strategize your business plan to keep ahead of the competition with a variety of business settings, and make plans to build and develop your company. • Manage five employee types, each with their own role and specializations. Hardware Development: Design new products from scratch. Software Development: Establish and plan projects, manage your projects' daily progress, and evaluate your staff's performance. Factory Mania: Oversee your factory and manufacturing equipment. Craft high-quality products. Produce, Release, Repeat: Release and sell products in the market. Careful project management ensures that products are released and marketed in a timely manner to meet consumer needs. Home Sweet Office: Customize everything in your office from window placement to how close your employees sit to one another. Don't forget to add a foosball table and television for break time! Business Manager: Keep an eye on the running of the office, equipment and time spent with each employee. Gameplay The game features a simulation-oriented business management game combined with management and team building simulations. The primary focus of the game is to determine the right strategy for each of the users' businesses in the market, and that depends mainly on the user's skills, and a great deal of luck. Development The title was developed with the Unity game engine. The game was launched on Steam's Early Access program on October 9, 2015. Reception The Early Access version of the game was generally praised, with the game earning a score of 78 on Metacritic. In the review by Destructoid, reviewer Douglass C. Perry gave the game an 8.5/10. He praised the title's "really well-designed" UI, the "great sense of style" and "optimized controls" and called it "a game that has it all". In the review by In Game Consoles, reviewer Mark Taylor called Tech Corp. "a really nice computer simulation business game". He also gave the game 8/10.
